Cassidy Buescher -- Portfolio Entry A (C/P)
Character Education Diversity Workshop

The sophomore character education class completed a project on diversity in which they paired with someone they felt was most similar to them and then discussed and eventually created posters articulating one significant way in which they found themselves different from their partners. A community and political leader promotes and models multicultural awareness, gender sensitivity, socioeconomic, racial, and ethnic understanding in the school community, a task which I believe is particularly important in a small, rural school with little cultural diversity. As leader, it is my job to ensure that our school culture demonstrates an attitude in which open-mindedness, empathy, tolerance, and a multicultural awareness remain at the forefront of our curriculum. I can do this by acting as a model of acceptance and a reference for opportunities to integrate activities promoting diversity in the classroom.
